Loved Cody! I gave him the nickname, Commander Cody, who wrote the song "Hot Rod Lincoln". Cody was my life-line, at T-land, in some instances. Every once in a while, we'd have a smoke, and as I watched him take a drag, I wondered why, because he didn't inhale. R.I.P. Buddy!

At first we were co-workers and I saw so much potential Cody had with who he was as a person. He loved people and genuinely cared about others and did anything to make others happy. We soon became neighbors where we spent ample time together and I had soon met his fiancée Jen. We instantly became friends and Carter and my daughter were best of friends. Cody would let Jen and I have girl time and he would happily watch the kiddos, but realistically I think they enjoyed the time with him than us having girl time because he was so fun loving. My favorite memory of us all was when we adulted and instead of going out for new years we stayed and listened to throwback 90's music. The night couldn't be better. You will never be forgotten Cody!

Cody was my best friend. He loved sales and everything about sales. My favorite memory was when we took a trip to Florida together last year. He was my co-pilot the whole way down and the whole way back. We would play word memory games to stay awake. When we first got to Florida, we dropped the girls and kids off to go grocery shopping. We came back late because we stopped at LU LU's a bar on the beach for a couple drinks. We got yelled at by the girls. It was worth it though. Cody, I love you, I miss you. I can't believe you are gone. You were like a brother to me. Until we see each other again. Please say hi to my Mom for me
